PLATE IV

ARMS AND FLAGS OF GREAT BRITAIN AND HER COLONIES

[1] The National Flag for use ashore. Flown on the jack staff of men-of-war and at the main by the Admiral of the Fleet. With certain insignia in the center used by diplomatic representatives ashore and afloat, and afloat by military authorities. With colonial badge in center, used afloat by governors, high commissioners and officers administering the government. [2] Flown by ships of war and by vessels of the Royal Yacht Squadron. [3] Flown by vessels commanded by officers of Royal Naval Reserve and by hired vessels in surveying service. With colonial badge in fly, flown by vessels in the employment of a British Colony. With other insignia in fly, flown by vessels in other public service. With royal arms in fly, flown afloat by consular officers. Flown also by several yacht clubs. [4] Flown by British merchant ships, and vessels not otherwise provided for. With imperial crown in fly flown by British custom house. Used by Trinity House with its jack in fly. [5] In the merchant flag the field is red. The badges of the states are shown separately on this page. [6] The New Zealand flag is like that of Australia, the large white star being omitted and the five white stars replaced by four red stars. No crown appears. [7] The badges of the provinces are shown in the last row of this page. The arms are placed in the fly. The circle does not appear.

NOTE. The circle on the Union Flag and elsewhere merely mark the position to be taken by the badge, and do not appear on the flags proper.

FLAGS OF VARIOUS NATIONS

[1]Without the sun this becomes the merchant flag. [2]The national flag, flown by men-of-war and merchantmen. [3]With coat of arms (see Plate IV) at the center, this becomes the flag for men-of-war. [4]The flag of Egypt is the same as that of Turkey. [5]The flag for men-of-war has a crown at center of cross. [6]In the flag for men-of-war the device appears in an oval at center of flag. [7]The arms are sometimes omitted.

FLAGS OF THE INTERNATIONAL CODE OF SIGNALS

PILOT FLAGS OF VARIOUS NATIONS[9]

[6]When used as the "code flag" to be hoisted under the ensign. When used as the "answering pennant" to be hoisted where it can best be seen.
[9]Instead of a national pilot flag, the International Code pilot signal P T, and the International Code flag S are frequently used. Chile, France, Mexico, Uruguay, and some other countries use flag P of the International Code. For the United States and Great Britain, see Plates I and V.
